

F&cT Finder

User Documentation

The F&cT Finder Graphical User Interface (GUI) consists of a search box, a Search button and two group boxes. In the Enter Claim search box, the user may type or paste his claim sentence related to a film or television (F&T) release.

The system covers facts relating to any credited persons involved with the F&T title, including their credited role (such as a director or an actor, for example). It also covers key dates relating to both these individuals (for example their date of birth) and the release of the title itself. A possible claim for example could be “Jennifer Jason Leigh starred in The Hudsucker Proxy”.

If claims are entered outside this specified domain, the system will not produce a useful response

A single claim only should be entered for each search. If multiple claims are attempted the claim is unlikely to be processed successfully. Appropriate use of Capitalisation when entering a claim will assist in generating more relevant reponses. The final step is to click the Search button in order to proceed to the result.

The results are then returned in the Search Result box. The first fact always reports the explicit result for the full claim that has been entered. The 2nd fact, in the event that the overall claim is False, will indicate any subsidiary components of the claim that are True.

The Search Result box, cen be utilised to repeat recent searches. Click on any entry to initiate that search. In the event that the claim is correct and therefore is a fact, it is placed and displayed in the Recent Searches box with a green color, as for example “Jennifer Jason Leigh starred in The Hudsucker Proxy” or “William Ragsdale is an actor”. Claims that were not true are then placed below this, but with red color. As for instance, “Jennifer Jason Leigh is an actor” or “William Ragsdale is a monkey”.
